

WHAT ARE THE CHANCES...

Of an abductor making his getaway on foot, carrying a sleeping child in pyjamas while the child's father and his friend are in the same street?

Of people who left their children alone in an apartment with doors unlocked, forgetting to mention they had done it when the issue of the abductor's entry is first raised?

Of anyone leaving a child if you knew they were crying when you left them the previous night?

Of turning down the resort's offer of a free babysitter the same day of your child's abduction?

Of nine/ten people dining at the Tapas bar, and not one of them thinking that leaving their children/babies alone was wrong?

Of all the Tapas friends deciding not to wear watches or carry mobiles with them?

Of all the children of the Tapas group falling asleep at approximately the same time, and none of them waking up?

Of a mother running away from an 'abduction' scene, leaving her two two-year-olds behind exposed to the abductor?

Of the parents insisting on an abduction having taken place when their child might just have wandered off, through open patio doors?

Of parents leaving their two two-year-olds in the care of the resort crèche staff on the days after the abduction of their older child - despite the fact that any member of staff could have been involved?

Of a mother knowing her child's toy could have had the "abductor's" prints or DNA on it, handling and even washing it?

Of the Portuguese police offering a "deal" which would be impossible under Portuguese Law?

Of a modern police force with access to forensic evidence suspecting the wrong people?

Of highly-trained forensic cadaver dogs from the UK being mistaken?

Of having your wallet, sports bag, oh and your child, stolen – all in separate incidents?

Of the parents not showing any real emotion at all for their missing child?

Of the parents of an abducted child constantly forgetting to mention the £2m reward for her safe return during their TV appeals?

Of the parents getting a backer worth £350m to offer a Government employee a job as their spokesman?

Of the parents setting up a website within one week, and registering Madeleine's eye defect as a trademark within 2 weeks of her disappearance?

Of the parents not sacking a detective agency who endangered the life of their child by announcing her location and her imminent rescue - on two separate occasions?

Of the parents promoting their daughter's one distinctive feature, her eye defect that would surely endanger her life by making her value to a potential abductor too risky – and doing this against the advice of the police?

Of innocent parents refusing to help the police investigating the disappearance of their child by answering questions and not being immediately willing to take part in a reconstruction?

Two country's police forces
Ex Sas officers
30 private detectives
The backing of several millionaires
Government intervention
A blessing by the Holy Father
A £2 million reward
An unprecedented 'awareness' campaign
A £1m fighting fund' donated by the public
The unstinting support of the British media
Interpol
The world's best sniffer dogs..
The world's most respected forensic scientists

... and still not a single lead!
Still not a single clue other than a friend's sighting to support the abduction theory!

What are the chances?

Read the stories in the papers carefully and ask – what are they NOT telling me?

More information can be found at the following:

INTERNET